TO REVISE CRIMINAL LAW

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

FAR-REACHING changes in the Arkansas criminal code are proposed today by the Futrell commission headed by Attorney Abe Collins, of DeQueen. Mr. Collins believes the cost of administering the criminal courts can be cut in half, at the same time speeding up justice.

Christians Agree on Reforming of World Calendar

Roman and Greek Catholic, and Protestant Churches in Agreement

EASTER APRIL 8TH

Holiday Would Always Fall on That Date, in New Calendar

DAYTON, Ohio.—Agreement between the three great branches of the Christian church—Catholic, Protestant and Greek Orthodox—concerning fixed dates for Easter and other feasts and related fundamental calendar reform, was made public here Tuesday by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Importance of this reform is pointed out in the report of the council's Department of Relations with Churches Abroad. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of New York, is chairman of this department.

First Agreement

"For the first time in modern history all the churches of the world have actually been consulted on a specific question and replies are now in hand which seem likely to lead the League of Nations to proceed with the plan," the Cadman report states. Adding that, "The result will be that instead of having Christians celebrating Easter, Christmas and other feasts on different dates respectively, the whole Christian world will at least be one in at least this particular."

The League of Nations has been sponsoring calendar reforms for several years.

The world calendar thus approved is described as balanced in structure and perpetual form. Its 12 months are multiples of halves and quarters. The equal quarters, as against the proposed 13-month calendar, consist of three months, the first month of each quarter has 31 days, the remaining two comprise 30 days each. The proposal, which will be fixed in certain week days, each month has 28 week days.

Easter April 8

Under the new calendar, Easter will fall each year on Sunday, April 8, instead of varying over a period of a month, from March 23, to April 25. Inasmuch as Easter fixes dates for all other feasts and fasts except Christmas and Epiphany, the entire ecclesiastical year will thus be immovable. The only change to be made with Christmas and Epiphany, under the proposal, will be to fix them to certain week days. Christmas will always fall on Monday and Epiphany on Friday.

Thus, if Easter always occurs on April 8, the other great feasts and fasts, which depend on Easter, will fall on the following dates each year: Septuagesima, February 4; Ash-Wednesday, February 22; Ascension Day, May 16; Whit Sunday, or Pentecost, May 26; Trinity Sunday, June 3; Advent Sunday, the ecclesiastical new year.

Hempstead Voting Places Are Named for Bankhead Act

Cotton Farmers' Referendum to Be Held Friday, December 14

LIST OF ELIGIBLES

County Agent Stanley Cites Those Who Are Permitted to Vote

The Bankhead Act referendum will be held in Hempstead county on December 14, 1934. The hours of balloting will be from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Those eligible to vote are as follows: Any person who signed a 1934-35 Cotton Acreage Reduction Contract, any person who is or was eligible for tax-exemption certificates in 1934, any person who presents proof that he owns, and has a present right to produce cotton, on a cotton farm, or any person who signs (by signature or other mark) and files a witnessed written statement that he has made arrangements to produce cotton on a cotton farm in 1935 (that is, has entered into a lease or sharecropping agreement to grow cotton on a cotton farm in 1935), is deemed eligible to vote on the continuation of the Bankhead Act for the crop year 1935-36 (June 1, 1935, to May 31, 1936). (A cotton farm is any farm on which cotton has been produced commercially one or more years since 1927).

Frank R. Stanley, Hempstead county agent, gives the list of voting places for Hempstead county, as outlined by the county committee:

DeRoan Township: Rocky Mount; Hope, City Hall; Hope, Arkansas Bank

First Straw Vote Returns
By noon Wednesday 13 signed ballots had reached The Star from yesterday's publication of its straw vote on the Bankhead Law. All 13 votes favored retention of the Bankhead Law. Of the 13 voters, 12 favored some form of compulsory crop control, while the 13th failed to express himself.

The straw-vote provides for an expression (1.) on some form of compulsory crop control, and (2.) on the Bankhead Law specifically. The Star is repeating publication of the ballot today, in case some of its 2,000 farm subscribers have overlooked voting.

Mail or bring your ballot to The Star office at once—for the tabulation must be completed this week to give an indication of how this territory is going to vote in the actual election November 14.

Ulm and 2 Pals Believed Lost in Ocean Air Crash

"Star of Australia" Misses Radio Direction Beacon, Lost at Sea

COULDN'T FIND ISLE

Tragic Radio Message Reveals They Missed Tiny Hawaiian Islands

HONOLULU, H. I.—(AP)—Through the air and over the water, Army, Navy and private searchers were hunting Wednesday for Flight Lieutenant Charles T. P. Ulm and his two companions whose trans-Pacific plane was forced to an ocean landing. The exact location of the luckless adventurers is unknown. The men had virtually no chance of surviving their plane more than an hour or so, as they carried no life-saving equipment.

Copyright Associated Press

HONOLULU—(AP)—The monoplane Star of Australia, flying from Oakland, Cal., to Honolulu, fell into the sea Tuesday night when its engines stopped for lack of fuel and a widespread search was started for Lieut. Charles T. P. Ulm and his two companions. Flying through stormy weather at an altitude of 12,000 feet, Lieutenant Ulm maneuvered for two hours, attempting to pick up the radio direction beacon before sending out his first SOS.

Fr 18 hours the silver and orange colored monoplane had roared on its way over the ocean before the first warning the voyagers were facing trouble.

"We have very little gasoline left," Operator Skilling reported. About half an hour later came another message, telling anxious listeners the Star of Australia was off its course to the islands and appealing for the radio beacon, which was being broadcast continually.

Badly Lost

"I don't know if I am north or south of the islands," Ulm said. And later: "Have no position. Must be badly lost."

There quickly followed appeals for a launch and for the army and navy to stand by.

Within a half-hour these messages telling of the fliers' peril came through the air:

9:03 a. m. "SOS!"

9:08 a. m. "Going down into sea now. Plane will float."

9:13 a. m. "SOS! SOS! SOS!"

9:24 a. m. "We are turning into wind. Come pick up us."

9:30 a. m. "On water now. SOS!"

At the first sign of the plane's danger, army and navy forces went into action and the U. S. President Coolidge turned from his course to render aid.

Ulm previously had passed the liner and the officers on the ship believed it possible the plane had crashed to the ocean a short time afterward.

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Every Little Beat of Heart Has Meaning All Its Own

Of course, you are aware of the fact that you have a heart. And probably you can feel your own pulse. But it is not advisable for you to do so, unless you realize the significance of the pulse and the heart beat. Otherwise you are likely to misinterpret the significance of what you feel or determine.

People who are hypersensitive or neurotic may get greatly worried about their heart beats and complain of palpitations and pains in the heart, besides other manifestations more likely to be due to trouble with digestion than with the heart.

Overuse of tobacco, coffee, tea, or alcohol is frequently associated with digestive trouble and also with reference to the heart. Women, approaching the period when they pass from maturity into old age, are also likely to get symptoms which are referred to the heart.

During the World War the relationship between extreme nervous excitement and the heart beat was recognized, and the term "irritable heart" was applied to a condition in which there is shortness of breath, palpitation, and a good deal of fatigue.

The normal heart beats from 70 to 75 times a minute, but not infrequently from 80 to 85 times a minute, and in some people from 50 to 60 times a minute. The heart rate in babies and children is likely to be much higher than in grown people.

At birth, the heart beats around 130 times a minute; at 6 years of age, about 100 times a minute; at 10 years, about 90 times a minute; and at 15 about 85 times a minute.

The heart beat gets much more rapid when there is exercise or excitement. It gets more rapid in fevers and in the presence of severe infections. It is much faster when there is overaction of the thyroid gland.

Some persons normally have heart beats of from 50 to 60, but usually this is much lower than normal. The heart beat gets a little slower with age, fatigue, and during exposure to cold.

In certain conditions involving the brain, with pressure inside the skull, the heart beat is likely to get slower. More interesting and significant, however, than either a rapid or a slow heart is an irregular heart.

Irregularity of the heart, or a severe change in its rhythm, should be taken as sufficiently significant to bring about a visit to a doctor who can make an adequate study of the case.

A sudden change in rhythm and irregularity of the heart beat may indicate changes in its muscles or in its nerve supply, the significance of which can be determined only by proper scientific study.

A BOOK A DAY

Is a Cow Romantic? Just Read This Book—"Red Heifer" Is a Novel of the Australian Range

If you have ever had any personal dealings with a cow, you will understand me when I say that this noble beast, while a friend of man, is undoubtedly one of the least romantic of all animals.

Nevertheless, an Australian novelist, named F. D. Davidson has succeeded—in the book, "Red Heifer"—in writing a very interesting and romantic novel about the range country of Australia, and his heroine is a perfectly ordinary red cow!

That, perhaps, isn't strictly correct. She wasn't perfectly ordinary. She had just that extra bit of guignon and cantankerousness which enabled her to break loose from the herd, at the time of the roundup, and escape to the foothills.

There she found a wandering band of wild cattle, to which she attached herself and of which she became the leader.

Yes, says Mr. Davidson, she was the leader; wild cattle are led by cows, not by bulls. The bull does the fighting and makes all the noise, but the gang is always led by some wise old matron.

So this red cow led this band until, finally, the Australian soldiers extended the noose, tamed the last of the wild country, and wiped out the wild band.

Now all this makes a highly interesting story. Not only does the author succeed in telling his tale, so to speak from the bovine viewpoint; he gives a fine picture of Australian range life, and a sketch of the winning of the Australian west, which seems to have been quite as romantic as its counterpart was in the United States.

Published by Coward-McCann, this book sells for $2.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Ungracious Child Needs Fighting Playmates

"Ruth doesn't know how to play with other children," said a mother. "She meets a nice little girl and brings her home and in about fifteen minutes the visitor goes home offended. Ruth even stops them and pushes them over."

"It is usually the way with the lone child," I assured her, "especially one who has been sick as much as Ruth. You can't expect her to know social grace when she hasn't the slightest idea about the rights of other children."

This was two years ago. Ruth was starting to Kindergarten. So I advised her mother to be patient. "Do what you can to explain that she must be kind to the others, but in the meantime she will be getting the 'feel' of fair play."

Time went on. Complaints came from the teacher. Ruth was good enough but she was mean. She found herself outside of everything. The other mites wouldn't play with her or walk with her.

Seemed Like Misfit
At last the little girl was removed. It just seemed that she was going to be a misfit everywhere.

Then finally she found a friend. This little friend was nobody's fool. She wasn't going to be booted around, because she could scratch and slap and tear some hair herself. When Ruth sent her home she didn't go. Ruth stayed and held her own—slid out of turn, picked the best doll, chose the biggest piece of candy and told her hostess where to get off without mincing words.

And Ruth adored her. Here was a real soul-mate, some one she could understand. And the soul-mate evidently felt the same way. They fought half the time like Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dee, and the other half had their arms around each other.

Both started to school then. Reports came that Ruth was doing splendidly. And suddenly our small friend came out of bondage. She seemed to find herself. Sweetness and peace developed. She became as natural and sweet as any child in town.

She Just Found Her Match
She and her little friend are still chums. There is, however, no more biting and hair-pulling.

The result, I think, of two or three things. One was that this spoiled child had to get used to the idea that it wasn't her world. In that period she was bound to make enemies. Another was that her good inherent qualities began to sprout as she got older and realized that babyish tactics were not getting her anywhere.

But the big factor in her metamorphosis, I believe, was in finding her match, a child who refused to be brow-beaten.

When a mother refuses to allow her darling to play with anyone who isn't keen on the amenities, she might do well to keep an eye on the situation. Polite children are naturally the finest play-fellows, but aren't there times when a little get-as-good-as-you-give treatment is good medicine?

Ruth chose her own medicine and that made it all the easier.

Lighten Beauty Cares.

Recently I asked an important cos-

metician what he considered the most important thing to remember when applying makeup. "To be in the right light," he said.

In other words, you should be in front of a window when you put on daytime cosmetics and under an electric light when you make up your face for evening. If you're dressing table never is flooded with daylight, hang a hand mirror near a window and make up in there. See that the bumps on your dressing table are so placed as to throw light on your face and not on the mirror.

If you know your lighting effects are conducive to perfect makeup there's no sense in distrusting your mirror. If it tells you that you have put on enough rouge to look natural and healthy, don't add an extra coat. There's no use in trying to get on enough color to last all evening. Be sure you look right when you start out. Then, as the color fades, you can freshen it up.

Use a little restraint when you powder, too. A thick coat probably will stay on longer, but it certainly will look artificial and uninteresting for the first hour or two.

Lipstick, of course, is an entirely different matter. A lavish supply not only will spoil the charm of your lips, but it won't stay on as long as will a very thin, expertly blended coat.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
ANN HOLLISTER, pretty and 20, finds work in a library. She is a commercial artist, although warned against him by SARAH KENDALL, her roommate.

Later she meets PETER KENDALL, wealthy and prominent, who is engaged to VALERIA BENNETT, society girl. Valeria spends much of her time with a girl crowd without Peter knowing about it.

Tony asks Ann to marry him and she agrees. Although Tony has promised to "settle down" and save money so they can be married, he does not do this. Ann becomes engaged to JOHLY MAIDONALD and displays an engagement ring. Tony counters with a ring for Christmas gift but on Christmas Eve when Ann and Sarah prepare a festive dinner party he fails to appear. Ann leaves next day that he spent the night at a drinking party. Heart-sick, she tells him everything is over between them.

In a restaurant Ann sees Peter. He has learned how Valeria has deceived him. They discuss their mutual unhappiness. Peter asks Ann to marry him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

ANN stared at Peter Kendall and repeated the words, "Marry you?"

"Yes," Peter said.

"I couldn't. Are you crazy?"

"No, I like you a lot. We're both unhappy and lonely. If you'll marry me we can go away together. After all, if you want to, you can get a divorce."

"It's awfully kind and generous of you," Ann said gently, "but I couldn't because you see there isn't any chance that I'll get over the way I feel about—someone else."

When they were almost in front of Sarah's apartment Ann recognized Tony's rooster. She saw Tony—his hat pulled down low over his eyes—walking toward the car. Ann fought the impulse to cry out to him. Oh, she was weak as water where Tony was concerned!

"Please drive on," she said breathlessly. "I've changed my mind. I'll marry you if you want me to."

Peter drove rapidly. Behind them Ann heard the familiar sputter of Tony's motor. It grew fainter as they raced on.

"We'll get a license and then find a minister."

"The license bureau is closed," Ann said.

"There are ways," Peter told her. There were ways, as Ann learned. A sleepy clerk, routed from bed, was angry at first. Then, through some magic of Peter's, he turned into a smiling, eager-to-please individual.

With the license forthcoming, Peter and Ann sought a minister. They stepped out of the parsonage into a world turning whiter under a driving snow. A queer, remote, cold world under its blanket of snow. All part of this strange, unbelievable drama.

She was married, but not to Tony. To Peter Kendall whom she had seen only three times in her life. Because Peter was miserable and generous.

On an impulse, she stretched out her hand to him. Peter covered it for a moment with his strong, big one.

"You're running a big risk," she said. "For all you know, I may be a perfect devil."

PETER, guiding the car through the drifts of snow, said, "You look more like a little angel."

"Do you really want to run away Peter? Because if you don't we'll stay."

He answered slowly, "I'm working on something now that I'd like to finish. It's a big job and will mean a great deal to me. I'd hate for anything to go wrong."

"Then we'll stay."

"No."

"How much time could you spare without making any real difference?"

"Two or three weeks."

"Let's go to Florida for two or three weeks," Ann suggested. "And then come—come home."

Peter thought that it was strange for Ann to be suggesting Florida, working out the problem as he had asked Valeria to do. Valeria had answered, "No, darling, I'd rather wait until you get that old job finished. I've been to Florida dozens of times and I've set my heart on spending our honeymoon abroad."

Peter argued with Ann. But Ann knowing now that he had no business to be running away to the far ends of the world, argued even better.

Presently he was telling her about the place he had bought on the Florida coast during the poor days. You drove through a desert wilderness to get there. And came at last to his small place, called "World's End."

He had named it that because the beautiful small take curved about it and some mornings when you woke the mist would be deep over everything and the opposite side of the lake hidden. It seemed exactly as though you were looking into a misty void from the rim of the world.

Then after a while the sun would come up and you could see the orange trees in the grove about the small house, sparkling with dew and the beach stretching down to the lake. There were trees, heavy with gray moss, bordering the narrow drive.

Peter had bought the place when everybody was buying. But he had never been sorry. The site was beautiful and picturesque and would always be a fine place to go when he wanted rest and quiet.

If Ann preferred they could go to Palm Beach or Miami instead of the lonely little retreat in the Florida woods.

"No," Ann told him. "I said I wanted to go to the end of the world. Peter, and that's where we're going."

"It isn't as though we'll be cut off from civilization," Peter said. "We can drive to Orlando and Tampa and St. Petersburg."

SARAH opened the door when they arrived at the apartment. "Hello, Ann." She stared in amazement at Peter and acknowledged the introduction with a

"Pleased to know you," Sarah said, realizing how "countryified" the words sounded. It was awful, dropping into small-town ways whenever she was excited. And caught like this, her face as shiny as a kitchen pan, and wearing an old ring of a house dress.

"Come in," Sarah said, "only give me a little time for a running start—"

A moment later Ann followed Sarah into her room. Sarah had hopped down in a chair.

"Ann! Where's Tony? Where did you pick up Peter Kendall?"

"I've just married Peter. Will you help me pack some things? We're going to Florida tonight."

Sarah, staring at Ann's white face and shadowed eyes, said quietly, "Are you ill? You'd better lie down—"

"I'm not crazy. I'm really married," Ann laughed queerly. Sarah's eyes widened. "Are you telling me the truth? What happened? How did—oh, heavens, tell me something quick!"

Ann began her story. And after a little Sarah was piecing it together, wisely fitting in things which Ann was loyally withholding. Ann had married Peter because she had had a terrible quarrel with Tony and Valeria had hurt Peter.

What a strange, mad thing to do. "We'll have to hurry," Ann said. "Peter said he would be back in an hour."

They tumbled travelling bags from the closet. Sarah wiped them off carefully, keeping up a running conversation, trying to seem cheerful. She was dazed. Surely, this was a dream. Presently she would open sleepy eyes and say, "Ann, I had the most ridiculous dream last night. I thought you walked in and calmly announced you were married to Peter Kendall."

"Ann," said Sarah, "do you realize Peter Kendall has been considered the most eligible bachelor in town? Think of all the jealous mamas who'll read about this tomorrow and wish their little girls were in your shoes. Think of Valeria Bennett. It's a good thing you're leaving town for a while—"

ANN wasn't thinking of Valeria. She was thinking of Tony. "I've done it," she told herself dully, an ache in her heart. "I've done it."

Ann's things, very simple but dainty, were packed neatly. Sarah, folding the plain little silk garments, said generously, "I have some things I want you to have. I'll have plenty of time to get more before Mac and I step off."

Ann shook her head. "It's awfully sweet of you, but what I have will do."

Sarah stared, perplexed. After a moment Ann said, "I can get some pretty clothes later."

"Sure," said Sarah. "You can buy out the shops—later. But that won't be now. Look here, Ann. Peter's a darned attractive man. You'll be absolutely crazy if you don't put Tony out of your mind."

Ann did not reply. With the packing finished, she sat in a big chair, looking very small, very weary and sad. She was wearing a blue suit, a white ruffled blouse and a small blue hat, fitting close to her bronze hair.

The telephone rang. Sarah said nervously, "Peter. You'd better go."

Ann whispered, "It's Tony. You go."

It was Tony. Ann heard Sarah saying "Yes, Ann is here, Tony. No, you can't see her tonight. If you come, you can't get in."

There was silence for a moment. Then, "You mustn't come. I tell you she can't see you."

Sarah hung up the telephone and turned to Ann.

"I couldn't do a thing with him. He says he's coming right out. He said he'd break down the door if I didn't open it. And he will."

"It won't matter anyway," Ann said slowly.

The doorknob rang. "Goodness, I hope it's Peter," Sarah exclaimed. "Let him in while I get your bags locked. And please hurry and get away from here. I don't want murder in my apartment."

metician what he considered the most important thing to remember when applying makeup. "To be in the right light," he said.

In other words, you should be in front of a window when you put on daytime cosmetics and under an electric light when you make up your face for evening. If you're dressing table never is flooded with daylight, hang a hand mirror near a window and make up in there. See that the bumps on your dressing table are so placed as to throw light on your face and not on the mirror.

If you know your lighting effects are conducive to perfect makeup there's no sense in distrusting your mirror. If it tells you that you have put on enough rouge to look natural and healthy, don't add an extra coat. There's no use in trying to get on enough color to last all evening. Be sure you look right when you start out. Then, as the color fades, you can freshen it up.

Use a little restraint when you powder, too. A thick coat probably will stay on longer, but it certainly will look artificial and uninteresting for the first hour or two.

Lipstick, of course, is an entirely different matter. A lavish supply not only will spoil the charm of your lips, but it won't stay on as long as will a very thin, expertly blended coat.

CCC Thanksgiving Dinner Described

Charles Griffin Writes Home From CCC Camp at Ozark, Ark.

Charles Griffin, first cook at the CCC camp at Ozark and a Hempstead county boy, writes The Star telling of the meal he prepared and served to the CCC boys for Thanksgiving. His letter:

"The menu of what the 748th Company of the CCC had for Thanksgiving dinner, which I think the people in Hempstead county ought to know. We had:

"Bouillon, celery, green onions, roast turkey, bread dressing, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, brown gravy, cranberry sauce, string beans, lettuce and tomato salad, rolls, butter, pumpkin pie, bread, coffee, mixed candy and mixed nuts."

"I started on the meal Wednesday night and worked until the next day until it was served at 3 o'clock. I wish my Dad and Mother could have been here to eat with us, and lots of my friends, also."

"I was assisted by Pat Duck, second cook; Sam Alphin, baker, and Happy Harris."

"Yours truly,"

"Had I Been a College Man I Might Have Done Better," He Wires Them

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long, answering a criticism from Western college editors, telegraphed them Sunday that he had "never censured or undertaken to censor anything published at Louisiana State University."

The Big Ten Editorial Association at a meeting in Chicago last Saturday adopted a resolution condemning Senator Long for his "unwarranted censorship" of the Reveille, L. S. U. student newspaper, and his "demagogic political meddling in purely educational affairs."

In a telegram, almost 1,000 words long, the senator recited his efforts to aid education in Louisiana and declared that if he, himself, had had the advantage of a college training "I might have made our work better understood and myself less bawled for the building of the state's institution."

The four seasons in four forms appear. Resembling human life in every shape they wear.
Spring first, like infancy, shoots out her head.
With milkly juice requiring to be fed; Proceeding onward, whence the year began.
The summer grows adult, and ripens into man.
Autumn succeeds, a sober tepid age, Not frozen with fear, nor boiling in to rage,
Last, winter creeps along with tardy pace,
Sour on his front, and furrowed in his face.—Selected.

the government Tuesday. United States Attorney Fred A. Isgrig said that the government had not established ownership of two checks issued in payment for light bills at Camp Pike during the Citizens Military Training Camp in 1931. Woodford was charged with having converted the checks to his own use.

Judge Andrew Miller of Fargo, N. D. designated to preside at the trial when Judge Martineau disqualified himself, ruled that Woodford must stand trial on the second, fourth and fifth counts of the indictment, and overruled objections of the defense to testimony on these counts. Two counts of the original eight included in the indictment were dismissed Monday, and the government elected to try Woodford on the second count instead of the third, which Judge Miller declared to be substantially the same.

Woodford made a sweeping denial of charges in the remaining counts of the indictment when placed on the stand in his own behalf Tuesday. He described his connection with the Arkansas National Guard since 1916 and his service overseas during the World war.

DuVal L. Purkins, lawyer for Woodford and his brother-in-law, questioned the defendant about his resignation as United States property and disbursing officer in November, 1933, and Woodford said that he had resigned at Mr. Purkins' request to

'Flirtation Walk' Here on Thursday

Generations of West Point graduates are likely to get a wave of nostalgia when they see "Flirtation Walk," the new musical romance which comes to the Saenger Theatre Thursday and Friday, with Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and Pat O'Brien in the stellar roles.

This new picture presents the "Kissing Rock" which is to be found on the bona fide Flirtation Walk, overlooking the Hudson River. The "Kissing Rock," according to West Point tradition, is the Nemesis of all prim maids, and will fall on and crush any girl who will not allow herself to be kissed by an ardent cadet. As the Rock is still standing, it would seem that it has never had occasion to fall.

The Kissing Rock, in the new movie, forms the background for one of the spectacular musical numbers of the film. Led by Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler, scores of handsome cadets and beautiful girls parade down the length of Flirtation Walk where the Cadets investigate the veracity of the Kissing Rock legend.

"Flirtation Walk" is a thrilling romance of glorious youth. The action takes place in Hawaii and West Point and is the screens first military musical.

avoid embarrassing Governor Futrell. Mr. Purkins was then secretary to Governor Futrell.

Woodford said he handled stock and property of the Military Department valued at $3,500,000 and disbursed $250,000 in state and federal funds annually during the 10 years he held office. He said he had not seen books or records of the Military Department since he left the office, and that he had not been given an opportunity to explain the alleged offenses.

He said he had not caused the presentation of false claims, paid personal obligations with federal funds or issued checks on the United States treasury unlawfully. He described an allowance of $278.48 which is made quarterly from federal aid funds for gasoline for the use of the National Guard, and said that both state and federal funds were used to buy gasoline. Woodford said that no claims had been made against his surety bond of $25,000 for any of the funds alleged to have been misappropriated.

Two state salary warrants for the last weeks of his term of office have not been received by him, Woodford said. He added that he wrote to the state comptroller regarding the warrants, and was advised that payment had been withheld pending an investigation.

Woodford was on the stand 35 minutes and was cross-examined briefly by government lawyers.

City Buys a New Police Automobile

$1,500 in Warrants Handled for Firemen's Pension-Relief Fund

The city council Tuesday night authorized the purchase of a new automobile to be used by the police department. C. E. Baker, chief of police, was granted the power to make the exchange, in which the car used at present will be traded in.

The council agreed to take up old warrants of the firemen's pension and relief funds, and to issue new warrants, payable direct to the pension fund. The warrants totaled $1,500.

A committee composed of Roy Anderson, W. A. Lewis and R. L. Gosnell was appointed to confer with J. L. Rogers, relative to sharing cold storage expense for a carload of butter and other perishable commodities to be shipped here by the federal government.

Monthly bills were submitted and ordered paid.

The monthly police report was submitted. It contained: Number of arrests, 39; amount of fine, $300; fines suspended by court, $65; cases appealed to circuit court 5 for $55; fines worked out on streets and laid out in jail 5 for $50; cash collected on fines, $93.50; fines unpaid, $36.50.

Little Rock Man Expects to Reach Brazil in Home-Made Ship

LITTLE ROCK — (AP) — Somewhere on the Arkansas river between here and Pine Bluff, Fred Kahre of Hot Springs Monday was floating downriver in his homemade sea canoe bound for Brazil.

Kahre, accompanied by R. H. Parham of Norman, Okla., embarked on a pouring rain here Sunday on the first leg of a combination floating-sailing trip to South America and points between.

In his craft of home design, Kahre plans to make the trip in easy stages and estimates the journey will require two years.

Before leaving, the former dental technician at the Army and Navy General hospital at Hot Springs said he planned to stop over in New Orleans next Spring to test the sailing ability of his 35-foot craft on Lake Ponchartrain.

The trip is being made via the Arkansas and Mississippi rivers, Lake Ponchartrain and the Gulf of Mexico.

The additional 366th day in leap years is considered another extra Saturday between June 30 and July 1 and is called leap year day. These days are tabulated as December-Y and June-L. It is suggested by authors of the calendar that these days be made national holidays.

Religious importance of the new calendar is seen in the fact that the moon no longer will govern the fixing of the greater feasts.

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY

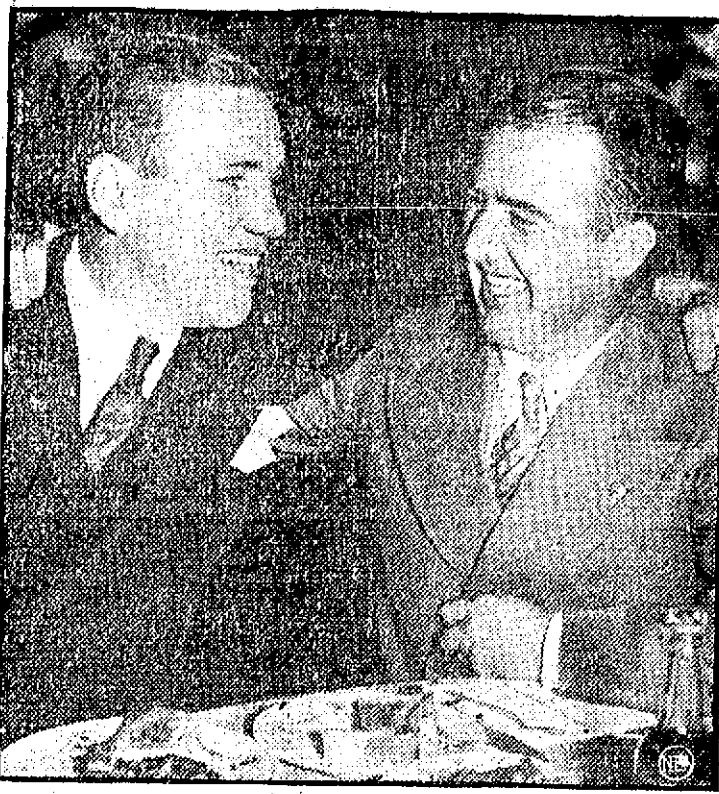

Under Cover Political Cartoons

"I was in a Turkish bath with Jim Farley Saturday and I didn't see any wings," Alfred E. Smith, former presidential candidate, commented when told of these caricatures included in the mural decorations of a restaurant in Hotel Chelsea, New York. Owners of the hotel ordered leases of the restaurant to remove or cover the paintings, executed by John McKernan. They will be left on the wall but will be concealed, it is reported. At left, Al Smith is portrayed sitting atop the Empire State Building, holding a Tammany tiger. At the right, Postmaster General Farley flutters around the Capitol as an angel to patronage seekers.

It's 'Colonel Dean' Now, Suh

Maybe that commission as colonel on the staff of Ruby Laffoon, Kentucky governor, had something to do with Dixie Dean demanding $25,000 from the Cardinals next year. Anyhow, the cocky guy delivered his ultimatum to Sam Breadon shortly after the honor was conferred during the recent baseball convention in Louisville, Ky. He is shown here, at left, talking over the situation with Lieut. Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky.

Huey Long's Enjoy Their 21-Year-Late Honeymoon

Their honeymoon is 21 years late, but Senator and Mrs. Huey Long are enjoying it to the full at Hot Springs, Ark., where they are shown, at right, with Mayor and Mrs. Leo P. McLaughlin, left. Despite Huey's announcement that the honeymoon would be a quiet affair, he and Mrs. Long became the center of attention when they arrived at the Arkansas spa.

Safety Glass In Automobile Popular

Insurance Companies state that most of the injuries from automobile accidents are caused by broken glass. Many States have recognized the great value of safety-glass and have passed laws making it compulsory automobile equipment.

Safety-glass was first introduced by the Ford Motor Co. In the Ford V-8 pictured above the new safety glass gives a wonderfully clear vision while providing maximum safety from broken glass injuries.

Sea Serpent Is Just an 'Overripe' Basking Shark

Copyright, 1934, Wrathall's.

Just when British Columbia was all agitated over finding of a "sea serpent," a joy killer came along in the person of Biologist W. A. Clemens of Nanaimo, B. C., and exploded the idea. He proved that the 30-foot creature shown here at Prince Rupert, B. C., was merely a "ceterhinus maximus," otherwise a wax-nosed or basking shark. The creature was described as having a skin like sandpaper, a head like a horse, and hide covered partly by hair and partly by spine-like quills. It had been dead for two months, as the small boys in the picture indicate by holding their noses.

Mother and Daughter Battle for Custody of Girl

With the courtroom open to the public, Mrs. Libby Starr (at left with her counsel, Judge Humphrey Lynch), and her daughter, Mrs. Helen Josephson, (right, listening to testimony), began the airing of their domestic battle for the custody of 16-year-old Constance Brock before Referee Joseph Morebauer in White Plains, N. Y. In support of her charges that Mrs. Josephson is not a fit guardian for her young daughter, Mrs. Starr attempted to introduce evidence of misconduct, but was warned by Referee Morebauer that, unlike the recent Vanderbilt decision, he might refuse to award the custody to either of the litigants.

Charge 'Badger Game' to Blond

Discovery of Mrs. Mary Coates, above, blond Cincinnati manicurist, and Harold P. Morton, 65, below, millionaire Cincinnati manufacturer, in a Chicago hotel by Mrs. Coates' husband and another man was branded part of a $100,000 "badger game" by the prosecution in the Chicago trial of the trio on a charge of attempted extortion.

Touted as G.O.P. Hope in 1936

"I stand for social responsibility without Socialism." That is the terse platform endorsed by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg—and it may be the one on which the G. O. P. will stand in 1936, for the Michigan senator, shown above, is regarded as presidential timber, since his re-election on Nov. 6 despite the Democratic landslide.

'Baw,' Says Joan's Son to Camera

Norman Scott Barnes didn't waste any time making his debut before the camera, greeting it with a tremendous "Baw" when he was only 18 days old, while his mother looked on admiringly. Posing comes natural to Norman, for his mother is Joan Blondell, cinema star, and his father is George Barnes, motion picture director.

Tough? Barrow's Tougher'n That!

"Double tough" by his own estimate and not shining merely in the reflected "glory" of his desperate brothers, Clyde and Buck, slain by police bullets, is L. C. Barrow, shown here in Dallas, Tex., jail. Captured as the leader of a youthful bandit gang, the 20-year-old prisoner shocked even his hardened jailers by his lurid language when questioned.

Waves Hatchet Of Carrie Nation

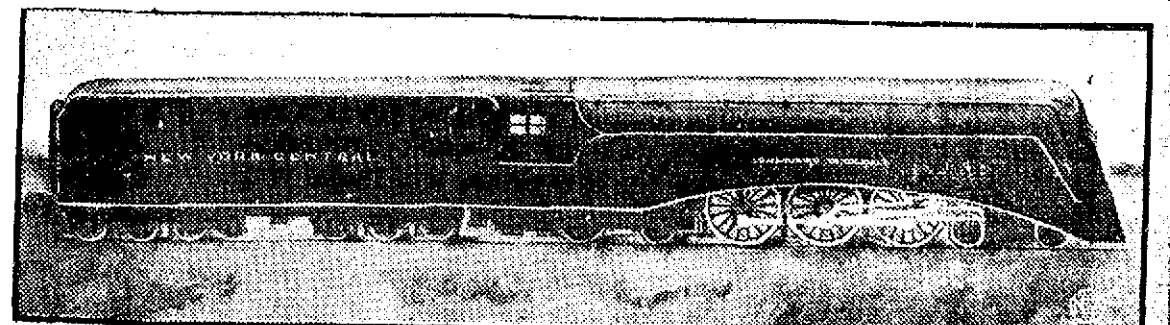

Another Kansas woman, Mrs. May Frazee, above, has snatched up the hatchet from where the militant Carrie Nation laid it down and is heading a brigade of 50 women pledged to keep the state dry, using hatchets on illegal bars if necessary, following the recent prohibition election victory. Mrs. Frazee is head of the Arkansas City W. C. T. U.

First Streamline Steam Locomotive Faces Test Soon

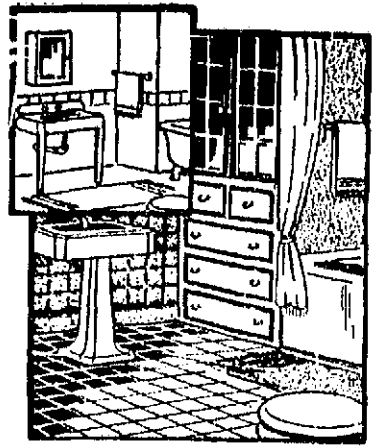

This first streamlined high power steam locomotive soon will be given a series of tests by the New York Central railroad to demonstrate the rail line's faith in steam, despite recent advances in Diesel-powered locomotives in the west. The engine, named the Commodore Vanderbilt, after founder of the road, is streamlined to cut air resistance 35 per cent at a speed of 70 to 90 miles an hour.

Radio Outlets in Home Are Needed

Wiring for Radios Now Is Considered Standard Home Equipment

The value of a house can be definitely enhanced by the presence of radio outlets in convenient places. Wiring for radios can be considered just as integral a part of the house equipment today as are such conveniences as bells, thermostats, etc.

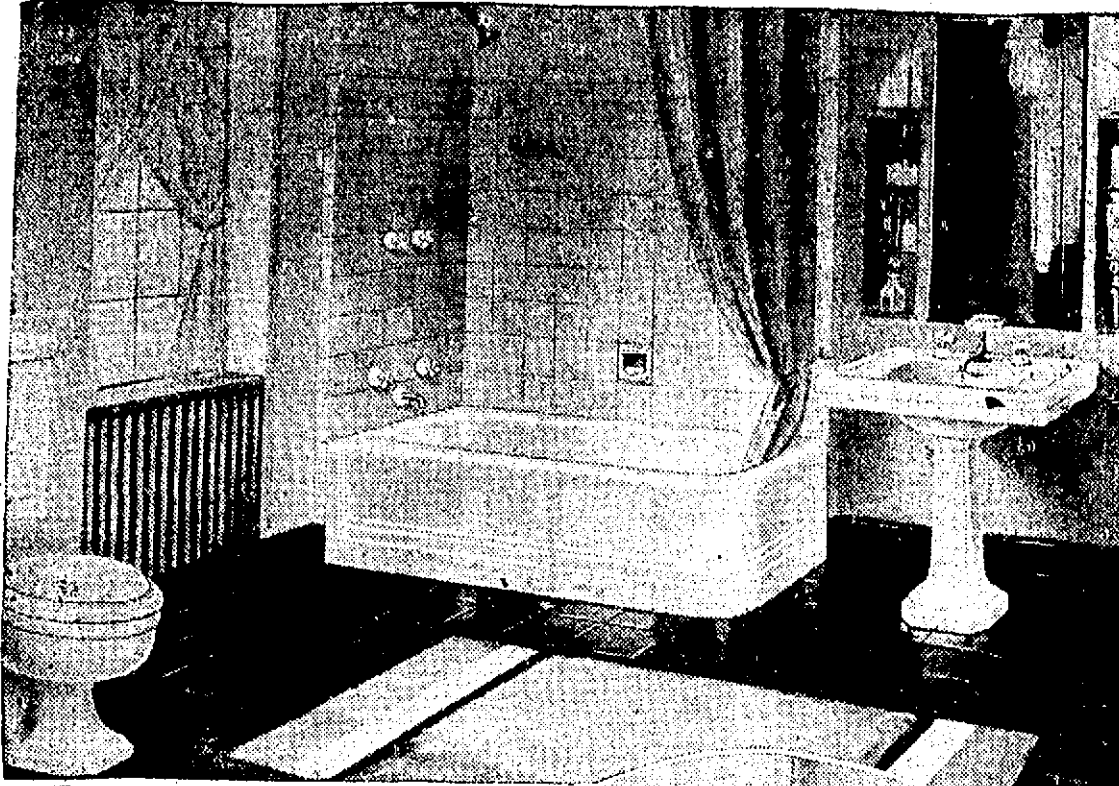

The lead-in from the antenna or the ground is just as unsightly as leaving the wires on the front door exposed.

Standard installations of radio wiring embody advantageous features. The ground and aerial are connected and provided with wall or baseboard outlets. This eliminates such makeshifts as the former flat conductor tape over the window sill, which never quite permitted the window to close.

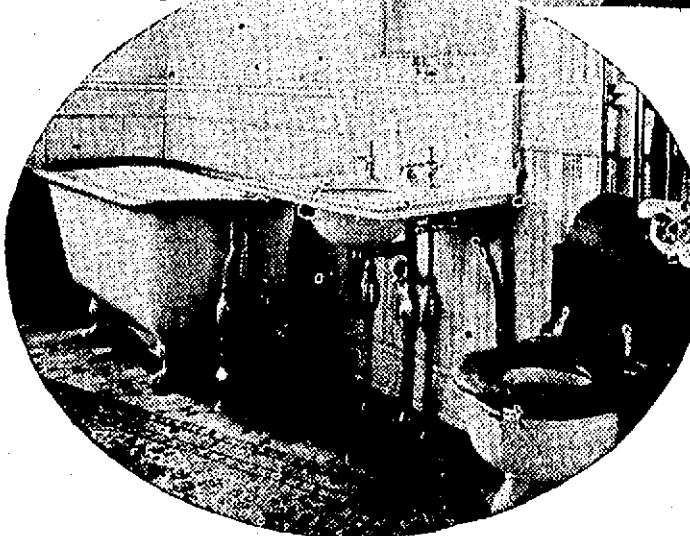

Outlets in various rooms may be provided, or a master plate may take the output of the receiver and distribute it to a series of speaker outlets located in different rooms. These in turn are either controlled by the station selector of the central receiver, or in larger set-ups, such as in hotels, apartments, schools, and other institutions, remotely, each outlet plate being able to select between two or more stations. Outlets for antenna and ground will usually have a connection to the house circuit to provide power for the radio set on the same plate.

In apartment houses, particularly, the owner should consider the unsightliness of the tangle of radio antennae on the roof. An installation of equipment as shown described not only makes the apartment more attractive but should materially improve reception for most of the tenants.

Bathroom Modernized Under N. H. A.

Repairs Demanded by Cold Weather

Roof, Chimney and Paint Vulnerable Points About a House

With cold weather beginning, property owners should check their homes for both safety and comfort. Needed repairs and improvements can be made through the better housing program. Roofs, chimneys, gutters and weather stripping should be carefully gone over. If the house needs paint this should be looked into before damp weather sets in.

Through this program the following can be repaired or modernized: Wall board and plaster, wiring, flooring, plumbing, fireplaces, heating plant, rafters, doors, electric fixtures, foundation walls and basements.

In addition many built-in features may be financed, including incinerators and garbage disposal systems, water heating equipment, wells and cisterns, including pumps and windmills, individual sewerage disposal systems or septic tanks, air conditioning equipment, built-in refrigerators, screens, awnings, wall and floor tile and screen doors and windows.

U. S. Modernizing Campaign Explained by Administrator

Government's Main Business Is Insuring of Credits Issued by Private Financiers

By JAMES A. MOFFETT
Federal Housing Administrator

The first function of the Federal Housing Administration is the insurance of credits made for the purpose of financing alterations, repairs and improvements upon real property. Our authority to grant this insurance extends only to the end of next year. It is thus of a temporary character.

Our second principal function is to set up a system of mutual insurance for home mortgages. Under this program we hope to make the long-term amortized mortgage the standard practice in financing the building and buying of homes. If this is done, many serious abuses will be stamped out.

At the same time we shall aim to make available adequate funds for the revival of home building on a sound basis. All these funds will be private capital. The Administration makes no direct loans of any kind to individual home owners.

Our third function is to charter and supervise the operation of national mortgage associations to buy and hold insured home mortgages. We believe they will help equalize interest rates and the flow of mortgage funds between various sections of the country.

In carrying out these functions, we are co-operating with trade associations, manufacturers having nationwide distribution, and local groups, in their plans to see that real business develops.

The National Emergency Council has appointed regional and State directors for its Better Housing Division. They in turn will appoint chairmen of local modernization campaign committees through which the whole program of information promotion and education will be carried out.

It is conservatively estimated that $1,600,000,000 is required to put American homes back into good physical condition. But our modernization credit insurance will apply to loans made for other classes of buildings as well as homes.

Our $200,000,000 fund, which may be used to insure up to $1,000,000,000 of advances, should furnish the kernel for a much greater volume of work. Experience of many modernization campaigns has shown that in addition to work that requires financing, an even larger amount is undertaken on a cash basis.

In dealing with the mortgage insurance field, one of our chief objectives is loosening up of credit in order to make possible new construction which is needed and demanded.

Market possibilities for construction are tremendous. Conservative economists estimate a theoretical shortage of more than a million homes. In Great Britain the average has been about 166,000 homes a year since 1919 and it is estimated that in this year there will be constructed a minimum of 300,000 houses.

Building Sub-Normal
Our records show that the homes constructed last year in the United States did not exceed 50,000. Construction is running at that rate or less today and has been far below reasonable normal since 1929. I think there is a lesson for us in the fact that England's campaign has been conducted right through the period of depression.

There are many problems which will have to be solved under the Act—the great variety of mortgage laws in the various states, the problem of more effective use of land for residential purposes, adherence to high standards of quality in construction, and the widespread misunderstanding that we can make direct loans to individuals. We made no direct loans to individuals, but deal entirely through local banks and other established lending institutions. And the loans extended by these institutions are made only to responsible persons who are in a position to meet their obligations.

There were 534 motor vehicles imported into the United States in 1933.

Housing Hints

Tips on How and What to Improve

Attend to Landscape
If you are planning to landscape next spring, now is the time to take preliminary steps. Most of the heavy work can be done at this time and the land will be the better for having the snows melt upon it all winter. This comes under the list of eligibles in the Better Housing movement of the Federal Housing Administration.

Improve Garage Doors
Now that frigid winter mornings are at hand, inspect the workings of your garage doors. There is real comfort in being able to open and close the doors without leaving your car, and attachments which are simple, practical, and relatively inexpensive have been perfected for this purpose.

Build Gymnasium
Why not a gymnasium, complete with shower, for father and junior? Installation need not wait for spring. It can be done now while labor is available and reasonably low in cost. Such a place would give Junior a retreat in which to rally his "cronies," keeping him and them out of mischief. Moreover, it would give father a chance to keep in closer touch with his son.

Paint Dark Steps
A narrow strip of white or a light-colored paint on the front edge of each step, especially when they are poorly lighted, as in the case of basement and attic steps, increases the visibility of the step line.

Build Lily Pond
Small water lilies can be grown in a pool 2 feet in diameter and with a depth of 22 inches. If the earth is firm, the bottom, well packed, will suffice. Masonry sides should be 6 inches thick. The cost, where you do your own work, will be trifling.

Add Bay Window
Space and comfort can be increased in your dining room or living room by building on a bay window. Be sure when this is done that the space around the window is caulked properly. Dormers in attic room also help the appearance of a house.

Build Wine Closet
Home owners interested in old wines might find much enjoyment in building an insulated wine closet in their cellar.

Water Cooler Eligible
Water coolers in store, office, or home, if built in so that they are a part of the building, are eligible for insured modernization loans under the National Housing Act.

A type of plug with a magnetized core, to fit the drain of crankcase, transmission, and differential, attracts small particles of metal cut or worn from working parts of the automobile engine or gears as they circulate in oil or grease.
